What Business Men Think of the Bill to Tax Dealers One Thousand Dollars.

Will Drive Cotton Buyers Away and Cripple Every Branch of Our Trade.

The bill now before the Legislature to tax and other celebrated works of Art in Sculpdealers in futures $1000 is the chief topic of ture and Painting, and numerous other convergation among commercial men. An Arpeal reporter yesterday made a reconnoissauce on Front street and interviewed a number of them. They expressed in every instance disapprobation of the bill and the onviction that its passage would work ser ous injury to the interests of the city. Their Shelby county legislators were anything but complimentary, the most charitable opinion being that it was the result of ignorance.

MR, W. E. MALLORY, of Mallory, Crawford & Co., said the tax was all well enough if it was to be paid by those whose transactions began and ended to spec-ulation, but would be injurious if exacted from deslers who simply took advantage of he market to buy or sell actual goods for Mr. Crawford declined to be interviewed, ut said he thought the bill was a lick at the

MR. H. FURSTENHEIM, f Furstenheim & Wellford, was opposed to the bill in toto. Like Mr. Mailory, he thought it was calculated to harm the interests of Memphis. All other commercial cities of any importance bought and sold futures, and the system was an immense lever of trade. For example, he said, I have a country customer who writes me in September that he will ship me 100 beles of cotton about the let of December. He is afraid that the price will decline, and asks me to sell for him 100 bales in New York or Liverpool to protect him against loss. This I can do to his advantage, and to my own, if he owes me anything. In the same way I can buy meas or produce when the price is down, for de-livery at a time when my experience teaches me it will be up. In such a case only can I compete with merchanis in rival markets who are reaching for trade in the Memphis district. This is not gambling, but a legit mate merchantile transaction.

MR. JOHN W. DILLARD, of Dillard & Coffio, expressed bimself in the same strain. He thought the tax would operate to cripple the cotton buyers and thereby work damage to Memphis merchants and the cotten producer. Before the future system came into vogue merchants had to hunt up buyers, and when the market had a downward tendency were compelled to make oncessions in order to effect a sale. Buyercould now afford to operate at any stage of the market, because they had the means of protecting their purchases by selling into against them. The tax would drive most he buyers away, and thus deprive our home people of their present opportunities to sel at any time and at full prices. He confine meelf to its effect upon cotton, because cot ton was the basis of our trade,

MR. ROBERT WOOLFENDEN, f Watson & Hill, the well-known cotto buyers, fully sustained the points taken by Messrs. Fursenheim and Dillard. He said: "We (the firm) have bought up to this time about 25,000 bales, and on a falling market. This we could never have done without the cut down in proportion to the risk incurred. As it is we protect the cotton in hand or in transit by selling the same grades for a month when it is quoted higher. For example, Liverpool to-usy quotes June and July deliveries at 5 46 644, and spots at 5 40 64d, leaving the buyer a margin of 3 32d upon which to operate. Besides, under this future system, we can buy all qualities of cotton, which we could not do without it. Formerly a buyer was limited to the grade ordered by his house. If low middling was wanted be threew out other grades on a he threw out other grades on a factor's table or left it. Now he can take the whole table if he feels disposed, and telegraph the house to sell the grades not ordered for some month that offers a protective margin. The option afforded the buyer enables the factor to dispose of the cotton in his hands more readily, to the ad-vantage of himself and his customers. We are now taxed $50 a year for license and two and a half per cent. on our commissions-the last a burden not imposed anywhere else The imposition of a further tax of $1000 would cause our removal to some other narket or compel us to get even by paying LUCAL PARAGRAPHS.

There is a growing interest here on the subject of a suitors for the favor of a dusky maiden, Young Men's Christian Association reading who played the one against the other with room and secretary who shall give all his the art of a true or quette. sustain this work among their employes. It is a remarkable fact that every city except our own, of its size and importance, has a Young Men's Christian A-sociation. Nashville, Chattanooga and Kuoxville have each a paid general secretary, a fine read-ing-room and parlor, courses of lectures, receptions and musical entertainments, and an active religious work for their young men. There is a fice field here for just such a work as the Young Men's Christian Association proposes to do, and such an organization would receive the hearty support of our business men. Mr. Cree visited our city some years ago, when Mesers. Hall and Cree were making a tour of visitation of the Sauthern cities, and held a pleasant series of meetings here. He does not propose to orgapize an association, but simply to confer with those interested in the subject.
